*Carry plenty of water. The granite gets warm and holds the heat.

*Walk quietly and you will be able to observe more of the animals that live here.

*Rattlesnakes may be present. Cool weather may find them sunning in the open. Heat causes them to retreat to the shade under rocks. Please do not harm them, as they are important members of the animal community.

*Granite mountains attract lightning. Do not stand at summit as storms approach. Hike down at safe & prudent speed.

TRAILS

Baldy Point Walking Path

The Baldy Point Trail starts at the Baldy Point Trailhead and leads east and then north. The trail first passes by a maze of enormous boulders, and then winds its way through a forest of tall oaks, cedars, and redbuds as it passes directly beneath the towering 300-foot south face of Baldy Point. Several seasonal creeks and natural rock caves are passed along the way. The trail is relatively flat for most of its first 1000 feet, offering an easy hike for park visitors. After that, it becomes a more rugged, backcountry trail.

Wichita Interpretive Trail

The Wichita Interpretive Trail runs from the Visitor Center to the Live Oak Campground within a wooded ravine (approx. 4 blocks). A trail brochure can be picked up from the brochure box at either trailhead. The trail has several series of steps and is not stroller friendly. Lots of animal tracks are seen as the trail crosses an intermittent stream.

New Horizon Hiking Trail

The New Horizon Trail climbs the granite face of Quartz Mtn, a moderate hike, approximately 1/2 mile long. A picnic area and small parking lot are available at the trailhead. The nearest rest rooms can be found across the parking lot from the Quartz Mountain Grocery Store. Fantastic views can be enjoyed from the top or along the climb.

Bicycle Trail

The paved bicycle trail starts near the park entrance on SH 44A and meanders through a mesquite grove and wildflower meadow, crosses the North Fork of the Red River below the dam and currently stops near the paddleboats & miniature golf. The bicycle trail is NOT limited to bicycles. Pedestrians and other non-motorized transportation methods are welcome. Skateboard and Roller-blade use is restricted to the paved bicycle trail.
